negotiations. 1972–1990

Gilles Deleuze

Martin Joas

translated by

New York

Press

University

Columbia
Postscript on Control Societies null Felix Guattari has imagined a town where anyone can have their own private, semi-public, semi-remembered, semi-forever, semi-workplace.

Without a clear picture of the town or any geography—without knowing the position of any element or any sense of scale—we don't have any idea into science fiction or into a control society.