What does your score mean?

Your test score indicates how ready you are to start your practical flight training. There are three levels: Not ready, Minimally ready and Ready. These three levels equate to a probable level on the ICAO Language Proficiency Rating Scale.

| Overall score on the reading test | Probable ICAO Level for Comprehension | Recommendation for training | Description |
|-----------------------------------|--|-----------------------------|---|
| 73% or above | High Level 3 or above (Pre-operational – operational) | Ready | You should be able to cope well with the reading demands of practical flight training. In general, you can understand fairly complex language despite some misunderstandings. |

|--------------|---|-----------------|---|
| 54-72% | Low Level 3 to High Level 3 (Pre-Operational) | Minimally ready | You are likely to find the reading demands of practical flight training very challenging. You can understand the overall meaning in many situations but comprehension is slow. Even then, you may still occasionally misinterpret what is written. You will definitely need to work hard to improve your English in conjunction with your practical flying. |
| 53% or below | Very low Level 3 or below (Elementary) | Not ready | You need to improve your reading ability before you begin practical flight training. You have great difficulty understanding written English. You frequently misinterpret what is written. |
